

The Outdoor Bloke

Cookie Policy

Cookies are little bits of code our website downloads to your device so we can track (anonymously) how customers move through our site and help you get back to where you last left.

We like to figure out what works and what doesn't, and keep improving what we do.

We monitor the volume of visitors to our website, how you found us, where you came from and which pages you view when visiting our site. We do not know who you are unless you contact us and tell us.

None of this results in us contacting you or monitoring you in any personal or individual way – we just like to know who our typical customer is and what they like.

We only use necessary cookies, which can only be disabled by changing your browser settings.